The usual confusion, last-minute tuning of the music, constant checking and re-checking of the lights... just another evening during the rehearsals of Chorus Line, a play by The Danceworx and Scene Stealers. The sets are minimal but interestingly consist entirely of mirrors. With the theatre season 'officially open' in Delhi, the musical which opened Wednesday evening, will continue till August 8, at Kamani Auditorium. The play is an adaptation of an original Broadway musical. Directed by Vivek Mansukhani and Ashley Lobo, it is choreographed by Ashley Lobo and the music director is Babush Santana. The musical revolves around the struggles, dreams and passions of New York show dancers. During an audition, one by one, the actors under the threat of dismissal, are made to tell their stories. The stories are narrated in song and mime, and the play promises some excellent dances and music.
