

Breakaway

Where celebrities love to roam

Jeevan Prakash Sharma checks out where some of Delhi's jet-set hang out in their spare time for a much needed break.....

ASHLEY LOBO

Choreographer

After a whole day's slog, I get tired and want to go out on a spree — but to areas that are quiet and calm. Driving late, at midnight is great fun, specially in open areas around India Gate, the outer areas of Delhi and the broad tree-lined avenues of Chanakyapuri. Sometimes I definitely go to bars and pubs, but the problem is that all good places get crowded and they all are closed by midnight.

Usually I go to Djinns at Hyatt and TGIF at Vihar. At Djinns, I like the ambience and also the does get pretty crowded at weekends, but the atmosphere is lively and relaxed and it is a fun place to be. Another visit is the bar at the India Habitat Centre. Its very, very nice matured there. TGIF is cool and the crowd out there is little more younger and easy going. I enjoy my time there also. Bali High is quiet and romantic and a great place to unwind. But when I have some more time, I prefer the two-hour drive to Neemrana. It is a beautiful place with rooms based on historical themes. Its lovely to spend some time there.

So Vasant music. It sphere is place I like to
and the crowd is more

